"The NSLC website is easy to navigate. It's particularly useful to have service-learning information available at one source. Saves me a lot of work."
Faith-based Service Organization, Maryland

"When I first began I was looking for a way to link the school with the community. I was also looking for a meaningful reason for the students to work on their writing and a way to make the study of history less abstract. What I hadn't planned on was the impact it would have on the students as they interacted with and learned from their neighbors."
Elementary School Teacher, Vermont

What Is Service-Learning?

Service-learning is an approach to education that combines service to the community with active learning goals for participants. Service-learning benefits both the community and the learner. Service-learning takes place in school, college/university, community-based and tribal settings. Service-learning is distinguished from volunteerism by its attention to individual reflection that enhances academic, civic, and social development.

"Service-learning has allowed me to inject the 'real world' directly into the learning experiences that students have in my classes."
University Professor, Missouri

Learn and Serve America

Learn and Serve America makes grants to schools, colleges, and nonprofit groups to support efforts to engage students in community service linked to academic achievement and the development of civic skills. This approach to education, called service-learning, improves communities while preparing young people for a lifetime of responsible citizenship. In addition to making grants, Learn and Serve America serves as a resource on service and service-learning to teachers, faculty members, schools, and community groups. To learn more, visit www.learnandserve.org or call 202-606-5000, ext. 117 or TTY 202-565-2799.
